magicJack™

Never pay a monthly phone bill again!

LAPTOP

"If you've pondered ditching your landline because of exorbitant phone bills, magicJack just may be for you. We were pleasantly surprised with how easy it is to use and the quality it provides for less than $40."

The Boston Globe

"A new device, the magicJack, may provide the cheapest way for anyone to start making ... calls using an ordinary landline phone. It is definitely the easiest to use."

BBC

"The magicJack, which comes with its own telephone number, offers the flexibility of making and receiving calls for free wherever the device is plugged in around the world."

The New York Times

"A little device called magicJack will let you make calls from your phone to other phones in the United States for fractions of a penny a minute. The magicJack, however, has a real telephone jack on the side, letting you quickly bring almost any corded or cordless phone into the 21st century."

c|net

"For $20 a year, you get unlimited calling in the US and Canada. Pretty cool stuff, and it's so easy, I would ever recommend it to my parents. The guys behind the device are the same people who started Talk.com and AOL Long Distance, which gave a lot of people cheap phone calls."

Los Angeles Times

"On one end is a USB connector that plugs directly into the computer. On the other end is a regular phone jack where you plug in your phone. And that's it. It's probably the simplest hookup in Internet telecommunications."

CNBC

"Skype and Vonage killer. Company must be watched. They have done this in Stealth mode."

"I have never seen a simpler to use product. You simply plug it into your computer, plug in your phone, and start calling. The call quality is perfect ... this device is so simple my grandmother could install one on her PC and begin."
